CHS grad makes record crossing of English Channel

By MARY BROWNFIELD

"I SWAM the channel backstroke," Carmel High School graduate Tina Neill said Tuesday in her characteristically understated manner. "It had been done breaststroke and butterfly and freestyle — and now I've completed the cycle."

Speaking from Dover, England, not long after her 13-hour-22-minute, 28-mile swim in the 62-degree waters of the English Channel, the 39-year-old swim coach said the idea struck not long after her first swim from Dover to Calais, France, in July 2003 — a crossing she made freestyle in 11 hours and 21 minutes.

"At some point, someone said, 'Would you ever do it again?' And I said, 'No, but I'd do it backstroke,'" though she wondered exactly how it would work. "On your back, you can't see very much around you. At least, that's what I thought until today."

Wearing a swimsuit, cap and goggles, Neill entered the water just before 3 a.m. Aug. 9 and followed a boat captained by Reg Brickell and his brother, Ray. They skillfully led her through the ever-changing currents and congested shipping lanes of the channel.

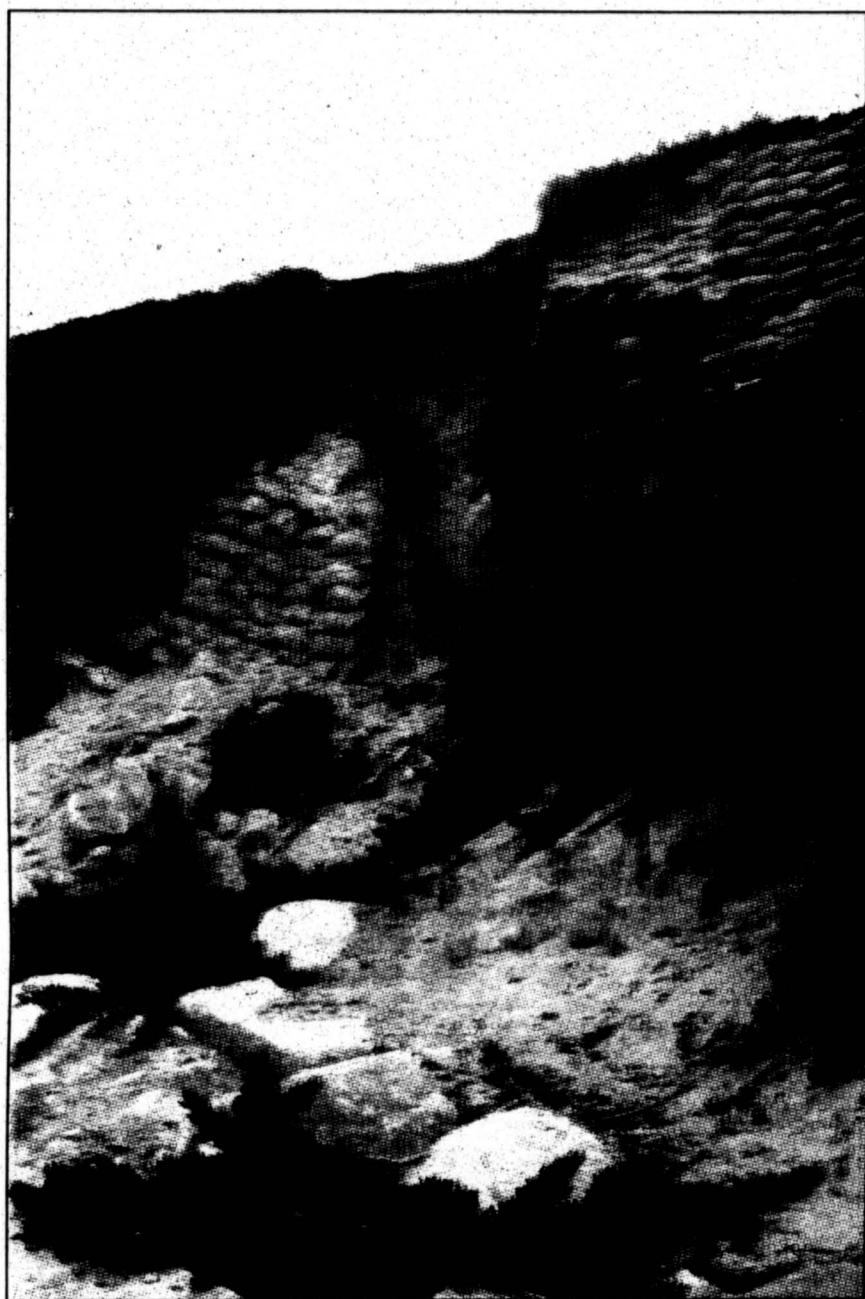

"They really have to know the tides, and they have to be in constant communication with the English and French coast guards," she said, because of the channel's traffic.

Her sister, niece and boyfriend were on board, as was an observer from the Channel Swimming Association, which formed in 1927 to oversee the sport. The official watched

Slide closes Scenic Road for at least three weeks

A 20-year-old repair project on Scenic Road collapsed Sunday, forcing closure of the road near Carmel Point.

A SMALL section of Scenic Road near Carmel Point collapsed Sunday, causing one of the area's most popular drives to be cordoned off and forcing heavy tourist traffic to detour through an upscale residential neighborhood.

The road could remain closed through Labor Day weekend, a Monterey County Public Works official said.

Vic Lewis, interim public works maintenance manager, said he hopes to have the road reopened by the first week of September, but work will be delayed until an emergency permit is granted by the California Coastal Commission and public works staff is freed up from other projects.

The edge of the road fell after a concrete bag retaining wall collapsed beneath it. The wall was installed 20 years ago in an attempt to shore up the fragile bank supporting the road, Lewis explained.

Sunday's incident happened just a few hundred feet from the narrow, hairpin curve in Scenic Road which hangs above the beach and is barely wide enough for two cars to pass. "It gave way probably because of the heavy surf last winter," Lewis said.

To fix the road, public works will use a more high-tech solution this time around.

"Anchors will be drilled into the existing topsoil," he said. "A rebar framework will be tied to the anchors." Then, wire

EIR: Private Flanders buyer should have to admit public

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHOEVER BUYS Flanders Mansion will get the historic house with plenty of strings attached to help offset significant adverse environmental impacts of the sale, according to a revised EIR released Wednesday afternoon.

The city council wants to sell the 81-year-old mansion along with 1.25 acres of land to fund capital projects, divest the city of a deteriorating historic resource that would be repaired and preserved by its new owners, ensure it's put to good use without bothering the neighbors, and protect and

Boy Scouts to spend $1 million on steelhead habitat

By CHRIS COUNTS

UNDER PRESSURE from federal wildlife officials who say a rustic dam at a Big Sur Boy scout camp could be killing steelhead trout, the Boy Scouts have agreed to add a costly fish ladder to the dam and make other habitat improvements along the upper reaches of the north fork of the Little Sur River's North Fork — a proposal which is quickly moving through the county's permit process.

Tuesday, the plan was approved by the Big Sur Land Use Advisory Committee. The very next day, it was unanimously approved by the Monterey County Planning Commission, said Zena Zeres, recording secretary for the commission.

The proposal has encountered remarkably little resistance for a Big Sur development project. Perhaps that is because the Boy Scouts of America is not only endorsing the project but are footing the bill, which could top $1 million.

Another reason the plan has been greeted by a chorus of encouragement is that it may simply be a good idea.

"It is a positive, well-thought-out project," said Ned Callihan, a Big Sur LUAC member who traveled to the remote Boy Scout camp for a site visit on the morning of the LUAC vote. "I was very impressed with the scouts' presentation. They answered every one of our questions and went through the project in great detail."

According to Eric Robinson, an attorney representing the Boy Scouts, the National Marine Fisheries Service was concerned a small concrete dam on the river — built in 1955 with an adjustable spillway to create a swimming pond for scouts every summer — was obstructing the migration of the steelhead, which federal officials say is a threatened species. Robinson said NMFS asked the Boy Scouts to improve the steelhead habitat.

Council bites bullet for now, but seeks cheaper ambulance options

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FACING A $100,000 increase in the amount it will pay to subsidize ambulance service this year, the Carmel City Council last week instructed city administrator Rich Guillen to see how costs could be cut.

City councilman Gerard Rose, who represents Carmel on the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance board, asked the council to discuss the matter after he refused to OK the $1,067,278 CRFA budget in June. That budget calls for the city to subsidize CRFA operations by more than $450,000, compared with $347,497 last year.

The ambulance agency is jointly run by Carmel and the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District and overseen by C.V. Fire Chief Sidney Reade. It has three ambulances: one at the Carmel Fire Station, one at mid-valley and one in Carmel Valley Village.

Because the Carmel Valley ambulances are staffed mostly with firefighter/paramedics from C.V. Fire, while the ambulance stationed in downtown Carmel uses CRFA personnel, the city is expected to fund most of its payroll.

With Carmel already paying for its own ambulance — including three shifts a day consisting of an emergency medical technician and a paramedic — councilman Erik Bethel wondered if it would make more sense for Carmel to run its own ambulance service. "I don't understand why we don't just have an ambulance and do it ourselves, if we're paying for employees and they're all here anyway," he said. "Can somebody explain why this all makes sense? Why do we need CRFA?"

"Because we share the other costs," Reade responded. Overhead — including bookkeeping, insurance, legal services, vehicle maintenance and medical supplies — is split based on the number of calls each ambulance responds to, with Carmel covering 46 percent and C.V. Fire paying 54 percent. "You would be duplicating those expenses."

Carmel also gets hit with most of the Medicare write-offs, which occur because the federal government won't pay the whole tab for an ambulance ride. The proposed 2005/2006 budget includes $185,887 in write-offs — $125,887 covered by Carmel's general fund. Carmel Valley covers its share of the write-offs, estimated at $59,241 for 2005/2006, with a special tax.

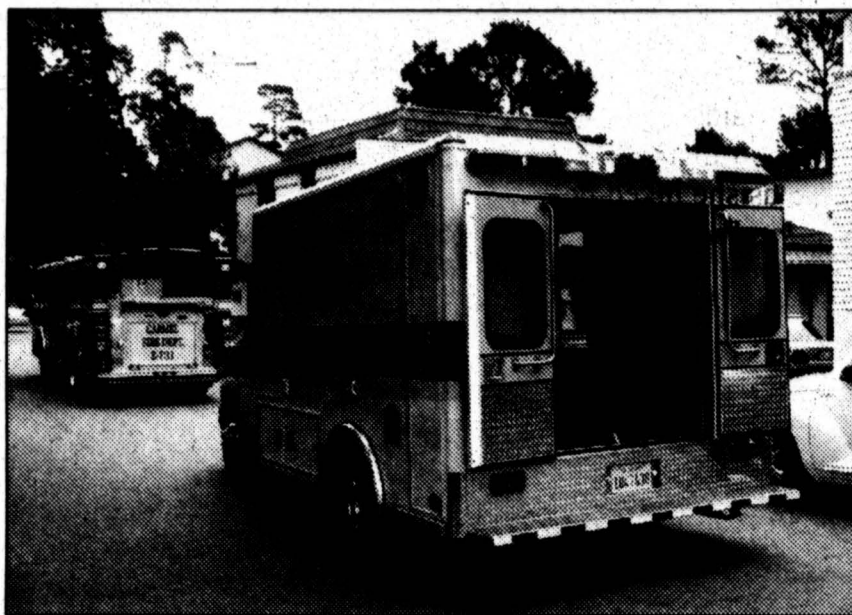

Reade said she's been developing ways to bring more money into its coffers, including expanding CRFA's coverage area so the ambulances can respond to more calls.

A councilman asks: With all the money we're spending, why don't we just have our own ambulance?

In addition, its workers still have no contract, and therefore no pay raises were included in the budget. A hiring freeze is already in place, and CRFA has raised rates each year, though not so much as to discourage those in need from calling an ambulance due to the expense, Rose said.

He outlined alternatives to the Carmel-CVFPD joint venture but deemed them all inadequate. "We could go to the county system, but I think that's a very, very poor alternative," he said. Monterey County contracts with an outside vendor for its ambulance service. For years, American Medical Response held that contract. This year, the county board of supervisors granted it to Westmed.

Rash of car burglaries prompts warnings from police

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BURGLARS SMASHED the windows of nine vehicles parked along Highway 1 last week, and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office does not know who's to blame. While they try to flush out a suspect, deputies are reminding drivers to lock their doors and remove anything that might attract a thief.

"A lot of people leave their valuables in plain sight, and that's what the crooks are looking for," said sheriff's Sgt. John DiCarlo. "It's easy for someone to break a window, grab something and leave, and that's usually the way it is."

Cars that seem empty are often ignored, because it's not worth the risk to break in and not find anything of value.

"They want to grab something rather than search for it," he said.

Such crimes of opportunity tend to increase in frequency in the summer, when more tourists drive and park along Highway 1.

"The perpetrator is often watching nearby and will see someone pull up and watch them leave," DiCarlo said. "They'll see them heading toward the beach and know this car is safe to check out, because the person is not going to come back for a while."

The burglar will usually break whichever window faces away from the street, and a passing motorist seeing someone standing next to a car is unlikely to become suspicious.

Between Aug. 1 and Aug. 6, nine vehicles were burglarized while parked on the coastal highway near popular hiking spots, according to the sheriff's office.

Aida Hasbun reported a break-in while parked at the popular Soberanes Point Trail early last Monday morning. Someone smashed the passenger-side window and stole her belongings.

That same day, Kristy Hodluck said someone broke into her locked car in the same area near Garrapata State Park and took her book bag and purse.

Three days later, Erin Atherton reported someone stole several items from her car while it was parked in the Carmel Highlands area near Spindrift. The burglar smashed a side window to gain entry.

Again Aug. 4, Jennifer Steven told deputies her vehicle was broken into and possessions taken after she left it parked on the side of the highway in Big Sur.

Also that day, Dora Norton said her vehicle was broken into as she hiked near the Granite Creek Bridge.

Jan Freitag reported his car was burglarized Aug. 5 while parked near Garrapata State Park between 7 and 10:15 a.m. The thief took a $125 pair of Canon binoculars.

So too was Mia Hamwey victimized while she and her sister, Monique Solomon, hiked the Soberanes Point Trail. She lost her cell phone to the burglar; her sister lost her purse.

Coastal Commission delays decision on Brazil Ranch plan after outcry

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE CALIFORNIA Coastal Commission postponed a decision Aug. 11 on whether plans by the U.S. Forest Service to host special events such as weddings at the Brazil Ranch in Big Sur are in compliance with the California Coastal Act.

"I requested a postponement because of an outcry in the form of phone calls, letters and e-mails from the Big Sur community expressing the concern that they did not have adequate time to review and respond to the item," explained 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter, who also serves on the coastal commission.

The forest service acquired the ranch, which was once owned by Allen Funt of "Candid Camera" fame, in 2002 for $23 million. Since then, neighbors have complained that such plans are in direct opposition to zoning regulations spelled out in the Big Sur Coast Land Use Plan.

A new public hearing on the Brazil Ranch is on the agenda for the next coastal commission meeting in Eureka on Sept. 14-16.

To view the coastal commission's report on the Brazil ranch, visit www.coastal.ca.gov. There will also be an agenda item on the Brazil Ranch at the Big Sur Multi-Agency Council meeting at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park on Sept. 9. Written comments can be mailed to Mark Delaplaine at 45 Fremont, Ste. 2000, San Francisco, CA 94105-2219. The deadline for submitting comments is Aug. 22.

Denied well permit, property owner sues P.G. City Council

By CHRIS COUNTS

TWO PACIFIC Grove property owners are suing the city council for refusing to let them drill a well.

The suit, filed Aug. 2 by Darren Davis and Randall Fuller, concerns a quarter-acre piece of land at 305 1/2 Bishop Avenue they purchased from the California America Water Company.

Davis, who lives in Marina, believes he should be allowed to drill a well on his property. "There is no water available from Cal-Am or water management to build a house anywhere on the Monterey Peninsula," Davis said. "If the public utility can't provide water for a new house on a legal lot, the obvious alternative is to drill a well. There are 15 million private wells in this country for single-family dwellings."

Unlike many properties on the Monterey Peninsula, Davis said his quarter-acre parcel is large enough to meet tough state and county setback requirements governing the size of lots eligible for well permits. And he points out that his well would have to meet strict standards for quality and quantity before county health officials would let him use it for domestic consumption.

Davis said a City of Pacific Grove ordinance that regulates water users is unreasonable. "The lot backs up to the Presidio," he said. "It's almost in Monterey. If it was in Monterey, I'd already have a well. But Pacific Grove has an ordinance that a lot with a well needs to be connected to the Cal-Am water distribution system."

According to Davis, he is caught in a Catch-22.

"The ordinance requires I have a water allocation," he said. "But there is no water to be allocated. If I could get a water allocation, I wouldn't need to drill a well."

Davis believes his property rights are being violated. "According to my lawyer, water rights and property rights are the same thing."

David Laredo, P.G. city attorney, said the city council was justified in deciding to deny the project.

"The proposed residence does not have a proven source of water," Laredo said. "The property is not [located above] an aquifer and has to depend on fractured bedrock for its water supply. If the well fails, the property becomes uninhabitable."

Also, if the well failed, the property would have to be connected to the Cal-Am distribution system. "And in doing so, [the applicant] would jump ahead of others on the waiting list [for water connections]," Laredo said. "The city's action was prompted by a concern for public health and safety, and a concern for equity for those who are on the waiting list."

Pacific Grove was a city with hundreds of residents long before it connected to the system now owned by Cal-Am. In those days, the city's water came from springs and wells in the granite layers beneath the city. Similar wells are also used by tens of thousands of Californians in areas, such as the Sierra Nevada mountains, which do not have aquifers.

'Gang of Five' allocates county's Homeland Security millions

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SINCE THE terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, hundreds of millions of federal tax dollars have made their way to local law enforcement and emergency services agencies around the country, in the form of U.S. Department of Homeland Security grants.

More than $4 million flowed to Monterey County, and a group of local officials dubbed the Gang of Five determined how that money was spent.

"The needs of the whole county have to be met first — that's always been the focus of how we spend it," said sheriff Mike Kanalakis, a member of the county grant approval authority, along with Pacific Grove Fire Chief Andrew Miller, county health director Len Foster, Seaside Police Chief Tony Sollecito and Carmel Valley Fire Chief Sidney Reade. "The underlying goal is always to benefit the whole of Monterey County as best we can."

"You would think you'd get law enforcement and fire and the health department in a room with money, and we'd all be fighting over it," Miller said. "But I'm amazed how well the board has worked together — how everyone buys in and understands the mission."

That mission is to be prepared for any massive emergency, whether chemical, biological, nuclear, radiological or explosive, according to Paul Ireland, who heads the county office of emergency services. Also, federal rules require that Homeland Security money be spent in a way that benefits the most people. Grants fall into five categories — administration, equipment, training, exercise and planning — and the GAA reviews written applications and hears oral presentations of proposals.

Besides meeting the other criteria, successful grant applicants have to be prepared to share whatever they acquire — not just within the county, but throughout the state.

"Between Los Angeles and San Francisco, California has a lot of potential targets," Miller said. "The state is highly vulnerable and we [in Monterey County] could certainly be called upon to respond."

All told, the authority has passed along almost $4.2 million, including $1.4 million in 2003, $1.6 million in 2004 and $1.2 million in 2005.

Though the county's office of emergency services could not provide specific records of which agencies received how much and for what, Ireland said the bulk of that money, $2,773,850, went for equipment — much of which will help numerous agencies throughout the county talk to each other during a big emergency.

"We need to be able to communicate on a large scale," Miller said. "Communications is a very complex and expensive venture, and technology changes in leaps and bounds."

Haz-mat benefits

The Seaside and Salinas fire departments have received funds regularly since 2003 to bulk up their ability to respond to hazardous materials incidents throughout the county, according to Ireland. Seaside covers coastal emergencies while Salinas is responsible for the inland area.

"If we have a haz-mat incident in Carmel, Seaside responds at no charge," Carmel Police Chief George Rawson confirmed.

The GAA also gave Monterey Fire Department money to equip its fire boat, which could aid cruise ships or neighboring coastal counties.

The sheriff's fledgling bomb squad — its members are in training after years of the sheriff being unable to get the program off

Preparing for a 'massive emergency' — chemical, biological, nuclear or explosive the ground — recently received funds for a truck and a $136,000 robot that can detect and destroy explosive devices.

Kanalakis' wish list includes a helicopter service that could respond to emergencies, conduct surveillance and even help fight fires anywhere in the county. He also wants a response vehicle for his SWAT team.

Pacific Grove and Monterey will receive money for fire apparatus and citizens training, and the fire and law enforcement chiefs associations received $250,000 for equipment.

The county sheriff's office also received $170,000 for personal protective equipment, according to Kanalakis.

Small agencies like Carmel P.D. were also beneficiaries, Rawson said CPD received

Brush fire hits dry, windy Santa Lucia Preserve

A GRASS fire burned about 60 acres in the Santa Lucia Preserve Thursday afternoon before it was quelled by a team of firefighters from several local agencies, according to Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance paramedic Graham Evans. The California Department of Forestry dispatched numerous engines as well as air tankers, bulldozers and helicopters in hope of keeping the fire from spreading, despite high winds and an abundance of dense, dry brush. Firefighters from Carmel Valley also fought the blaze while members of several Peninsula city departments assembled as a strike team ready to defend a large home in the area, Evans said.

Ultimately, no structures were threatened, and the fire was brought under control within a few hours.

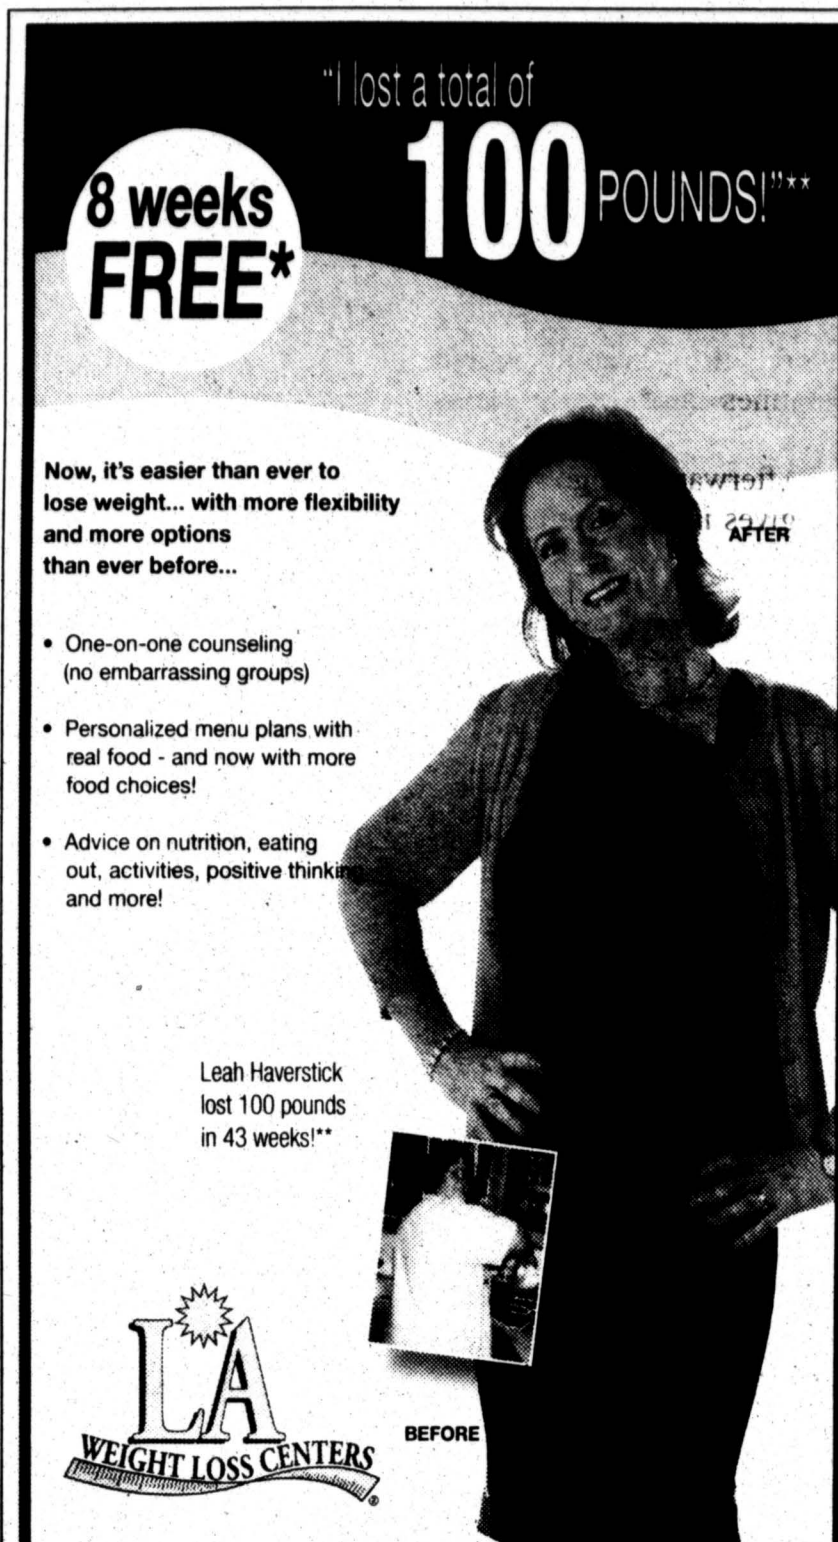

The afternoon was a busy one for firefighters, with blazes sparking in the San Ardo and east Carmel Valley areas as well. The Carmel Valley fire near Princes Camp was minor and quickly brought under control, according to Evans.

Sewer work done in time for busy week

SAN CARLOS Street will be construction-free during the busy Concours week, according to city building official Tim Meroney.

The Carmel Area Wastewater District replaced a sewer main between Ocean and 13th avenues, wrapping up noisy construction late Thursday afternoon that had tied up parking spaces along the busy street.

"They'll clean up that area tomorrow," Meroney said. "They will put in permanent patches [over their cuts in the roadway] after Concours weekend so as not to disrupt any more businesses or parking in the area."

Judging set for Homecrafters Marketplace artists, craftsmen

By MARY BROWNFIELD

LOCAL ARTISTS and craftspeople who want to peddle their wares at the City of Carmel's 35th Annual Homecrafters' Marketplace in November must compete for booth space at the popular Christmas sale. A panel of four judges will review their work Sept. 7 to decide who stays and who goes.

"It's fun to see everyone's work," said Cindi Lopez-Frincke, who will be judging for a third year. "Everyone is so creative."

Community services manager Christie Miller, who organizes the judging, said Phyllis Gambill, chair of the community activities and cultural commission, agreed to help. She invited Beth Culbertson from the Carmel Chamber of Commerce as well.

Last year, judges reviewed the work of 100 artists from Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties vying for 40 available spots. Once admitted, a vendor returns for judging every three years.

"First-time people are always good," Lopez-Frincke said.

"You have all these people with bears, but there might be someone who has done their bears a little differently. We want those people in."

"It's a big deal," she said, to win the privilege of selling in the annual marketplace.

Artists and craftspeople bring examples of their work before the group, which examines and photographs them.

"Afterward, we go through the pictures again, and everyone gives input," Lopez-Frincke said. The discussion lasts a couple of hours after judging closes.

The toughest part, of course, is picking the winners. But the end result is a sale that people faithfully return to each year — not for its snootiness, but for its uniqueness and good value.

"A lot of people come, and they can get something that's handmade and might not be available in stores, and they can get it at a decent price," said Lopez-Frincke.

The Sept. 7 judging will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Vista Lobos on Torres Street between Third and Fourth avenues, and no appointments are necessary. Artists, who must represent themselves, should bring at least two examples of the pieces they hope to sell, a photograph or drawing of the booth display setup, and a nonrefundable $10 jury fee.

The 35th Annual Homecrafters' Marketplace will be held on Ocean Avenue between Junipero and Lincoln streets Saturday, Nov. 19, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For more information, call (831) 620-2020 or e-mail cmiller@ci.carmel.ca.us.

Chef Conrado Geronimo brings a bit of Oaxaca to Carmel

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

MAKING 2,000 tamales for a catered affair is nothing new to Chef Conrado Geronimo, who has brought Oaxaca to Carmel with La Flor de Oaxaca restaurant at The Crossroads Shopping Village.

"We prepared 10 different types of tamales, 200 of each, for a client," he recalled. "It took us three days." On the day of the celebration, the tamales were steamed and served hot.

Nothing fazes Chef Conrado, who shares cooking duties at the restaurant with his wife, Maria. They jointly own the business. He goes about cooking and running the restaurant with the equanimity of one who knows the dishes he's preparing are going to be tasty and well received by his patrons. That would explain his smiling countenance.

Conrado began his restaurant career when he arrived in California from Mexico in 1978 and, not speaking English, became a dishwasher. He returned to his hometown of San Pablo Huixtepec for two years to learn the nuances of Mexican cooking from his mother-in-law and from restaurants. Returning to the Peninsula, he was hired as a cook by many establishments: Monterey Plaza Hotel, Carmel Valley Ranch, Lugano, Shabu-Shabu and the Plaza Cafe, where he became acquainted with German, Japanese, French and American cuisines, and also became proficient in English.

In 1990, he felt confident enough to open his first restaurant at mid-Carmel Valley, naming it La Flor de Oaxaca (The Flower of Oaxaca), which he ran for three years. The second La Flor de Oaxaca opened just a year ago in The Crossroads at the mouth of the valley.

During this span of time, he and Maria had eight children who currently range in age from 14 to 31. Samuel does prep work in the kitchen and sees to the dishes; Roberto, helps with the front of the house, as does Teresa, granddaughter Samantha and niece Carmen.

The small restaurant can seat 38, with four on the front umbrella-shaded patio where family pets are welcome, too.

Entering by the front Dutch door, patrons

are greeted by a pleasant ambiance of cinnamon-colored walls on which framed Diego Rivera prints hang and fancy sombreros and serapes are displayed. Mexican music plays lightly in the background.

Also on the wall is "The Great Chili Poster," with photographs of 34 chiles of all colors and sizes, from the respected poblano verde, to the tiny tepin. And if you weren't aware of the numerous sauces for which Mexico is renowned, you'll soon become so with the help of another poster with photographs of 140 sauces in bottles of varying shapes and sizes, all with colorful labels.

Homemade sauces are a specialty of La Flor de Oaxaca. Chef Conrado makes fresh red, green, tomato and white sauces. "We take the hot out of the sauces," he said, meaning the extreme heat which most patrons can't take. (For safety's sake, extra hot dishes are denoted with an asterisk on the menu.)

Chef Conrado said his specialty are the moles on the menu: Mole Oaxaqueño, a chicken dish with mole sauce made of chocolate, black peppers, cinnamon, steamed tomatoes, sesame seeds and bread ($14.95); and Mole Poblano, a turkey entrée with a mole sauce of juajillo, black peppers, broiled tomatoes, raisins, almonds and sweet breads (also $14.94).

There are four soups on the menu, two seafood cocktails, nine seafood dishes, 24 entrées and four combination plates, prices range from $4.95 to $16.95. All entrées are served with rice, beans and salad. Many dishes, especially those with cheese, are garnished with fresh chopped tepichas, a green mountain herb with a distinctive and pleasing taste.

If one were dining here for the first time, what would be a good sampling of Chef Conrado's cuisine? He suggests starting with memalitas — two freshly prepared cornmeal patties with ground pork, red tomatillo sauce and fresh cheese ($4.95), which would be ample for two people. An entrée to follow might be the filete de pescado — grilled sautéed filet of fish with cilantro pesto garlic cream sauce ($14.95), a dish that could feature either tilapia or red snapper.

For dessert, he suggests a sweet tamal because it is an unusual dish for North Americans, who are accustomed to eating savory tamales as a main course.

Other desserts on the menu range from vanilla ice cream and flan, to the unusual: Tres leches cheesecake, Mexican rice pudding, banana ice cream cake and coconut/pineapple ice cream. All desserts are $3.25 with the exception of the banana ice cream cake, which is $3.75.

Four Mexican beers are available, as well as wine by the glass, and margaritas and piña colodas are made with non-alcóholic tequila.

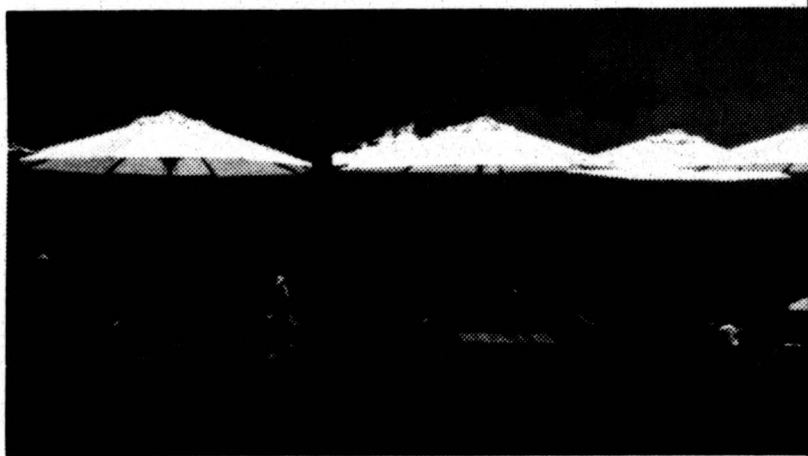

Lunch and dinner are served daily from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. La Flor de Oaxaca, located at 145 Crossroads Blvd., Carmel, is closed only for Christmas and Thanksgiving. Reservations are generally not necessary, but if you have a large group or want to be on the safe side, call (831) 625-3940.

Blending workshop gives wine lovers a chance to match the master

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

"I'M SORRY I'm late! I had an emergency this morning," exclaimed a harried Steve Pessagno as he hopped out of his pickup truck in front of his Gonzales winery. The short version of the story: Pessagno is slated to entertain 80 members of the Knights of the Vine Aug. 13, and his plans for a wild pig fell through at the last moment.

Since a South County event really isn't really complete without roasted swine, he did what any good host would: He went out and shot one. And it only set him back 10 minutes from meeting me on time. Not too shabby for a super-busy winemaker was recently named to Wine Enthusiast's Top 100 wine list.

As we walk towards Pessagno's office, there was a flurry of preparatory activity. Hedges were being trimmed. The building and sidewalks were being power washed. Picnic tables and benches were drying from a fresh coat of paint. His tasting room is usually open on Fridays, but that day, the sign read, "Closed." And with good reason — there was lot that had to be done. He talked about the next day's festivities with the nervous anticipatory enthusiasm of a potential prom queen. I've attended Pessagno-hosted events before, and I don't doubt for a second that the day will go off without a single hitch.

But back to the matter at hand: the Match Your Master workshop he's conducting at this week's Monterey County Vintners and Growers Association's 13th Annual Winemakers' Celebration. Pessagno will give attendees a taste of the role of winemaker, letting them experience firsthand the joys and frustrations of winemaking and trying to match the master blend of a Pessagno Chardonnay.

As we talked about the annual MCVGA event, a finally relaxed Pessagno commented, "I'd actually like to go to the Riedel seminar. I know you can taste and smell different things in different glasses." Personally, I've always been an Ikea glass girl (breakage seems to be my mantra), but Pessagno's enthusiasm chides me to possibly branch out.

Pessagno's 2:30 p.m. workshop at Custom House Plaza in Monterey will be set up classroom-style. Eight-foot-long tables will be lined with wine glasses. The winemaker will group the 50-some guests into teams of four, "because if everyone is trying to do it individually, it becomes too much of a mess," he said. "Plus, it also makes for lively conversation because people have different opinions about what they taste."

The workshop will be fairly straightforward. Each team will have four glasses of wine that are "components."

"They will all be Chardonnay, but they'll all have distinctly different attributes," said Pessagno. The four components will be: Clone 15 (a.k.a. "Muscat clone" and highly aromatic), Clone 4 (fermented with a specific type of yeast called CY3079), Clone 4 (fermented with a native yeast), and a Chardonnay that was fermented in brand new oak.

Prior to the workshop, Pessagno will come up with a blend of what he thinks is a consumer-appealing product from those four wines. It will be the workshop attendees' job to take the four glasses in front of them, and with a graduated cylinder and an empty wine glass, duplicate Pessagno's blend. "I will work with them on it, so if I see them going astray, then I'll herd them back in," he said as he brushed dots of blood from his bare leg (the, ahem, aftermath of the morning's slaughter).

Each team will be given a score sheet with columns for wines A, B, C and D. Descriptors of each wine will be listed on the backside, like "oaky," "high alcohol," "bright fruit" and "firm tannins." The teams will work to identify the components of wine such as tannin and acid and establish percentages of the components in each of the columns to create the comparable blend. The workshop is set-up to be interactive and enjoyable.

"Wine is supposed to be fun, not this really stuffy dry thing," said Pessagno. But he admitted there can be a lot to learn.

"If you don't know wine, and especially if you're not someone who works with components, it takes experience to understand what it takes to get from all of these different elements to something that a consumer likes. And that may include not using some of them," he says. "I love to cook, which is the same kind of thing — if there's not enough salt, you have to add salt. If you add too much oregano, you better find some more tomatoes to dilute the pasta sauce, because you can't get the oregano out." But that's what Pessagno does best. He knows what the consumer wants to drink. "It's got to have a little bit of oak, a little bit of fruit, some acidity, but not too much," he said of Chardonnay. As he steers the workshop, he may tell participants, "I want the wine to have a little bit of oak; I want it to have good fruit firm acidity, and I want it to have a nice finish." Participants can refer to the descriptors on the back of the score sheet and change percentages accordingly. He encourages people to work in increments of 5 percent. Participants will have about 30 minutes to monkey around with matching Pessagno's blend before he announces the winners. "If I had a dollar for every time someone said, 'We think our blend was better than yours,' I'd be rich," said Pessagno. "I always say, 'Come on and work for me, I'm pretty tough.'"

The whole blending educational extravaganza is expected to run about an hour. The workshop is free for event attendees, but space is limited and reservations are required. Last year, it filled up quickly.

The MCVGA 13th Annual Winemakers' Celebration takes place Saturday, Aug. 13, from noon to 4 p.m. at the historic Custom House Plaza in downtown Monterey. More than 45 Monterey County wineries will participate. Tickets are $35 per person in advance or $40 at the door. Call (831) 375-9400 or visit www.montereywines.org.

A Warring Absence: 'The effects of lots and lots of alcohol'

K. K. ROBINSON

A PORTRAIT of two strong-willed spouses fighting each other for power and control, "A Warring Absence" is an evening of accusations, denials and the effects of lots and lots of alcohol.

Thomas Burks as a drunken Dylan Thomas and Jamie Awamleh as his strong-willed but beleaguered wife in "A Warring Absence" at the Carl Cherry Center.

Covering the last months of the 15-year marriage of Caitlin and Dylan Thomas, it is also a play about deep and abiding love, the fear of being left alone and the anger felt when a loved one chooses destruction and death over life.

Thomas Burks portrays this Dylan as a tortured soul whose life is a series of narrow escapes from homelessness for himself, his wife and their three children. The Welsh boathouse in which they live is paid for by a female patron, and their furniture is repossessed for payment of debts. Only the desk where he struggles to produce his "work" remains; they and the children must sleep on the floor.

Dylan conceives relief in the form of an American tour, visiting 60 cities in 65 days to earn the money to pay his debts and reclaim his possessions. He will go alone as the trip would be too much for his wife, Caitlin, pregnant with their fourth child. But Caitlin, having discovered love letters from an encounter during his previous tour of the states, has other plans. "I will not be left behind," she warns him.

Burks gives us a constantly drunken Dylan, head down, hair covering his eyes, shuffling around the stage spouting dirty limericks to entertain his pals at the pub. He is lionized by the "locals" who buy him drinks. Effectively played by Tricia Wayne, Rob Foster, Seth Wetmore and Peter M. Eberhardt, they encourage him and his more grandiose ideas. "I should be flying around the country visiting with fellow inebriates."

As Caitlin, Jamie Awamleh commands the stage from the first scene. Her voice soars and

PacRep to present Broadway's 'Beauty'

IN A major triumph for Pacific Repertory Theatre, the Disney Corporation released the rights to its current Broadway hit, "Beauty and the Beast," and PacRep was chosen to present the Central Coast premiere. The show opens Aug. 18 at the Outdoor Forest Theater with a week of previews and will run through Sept. 25.

Based on the Academy Award-winning animated film, the musical brings to life the beloved "tale as old as time" of an angry cursed prince transformed into a snarling beast and living in an enchanted palace. With the help of a spirited young woman and her eccentric father, the prince gradually learns the meaning of friendship and love.

Adapted by Linda Woolverton, the show features special effects and illusions accompanied by the songs of Alan Menken, Howard Ashman and Tim Rice.

Already a legend as the sixth-longest-running show in Broadway history, "Beauty and the Beast" was nominated for nine 1994 Tony Awards and has had record-breaking runs in New York, London, Los Angeles, Toronto, Sydney, Tokyo and Madrid.

With musical direction by Stephen Tosh and choreography by Sherri Beck, the PacRep production will feature a host of Central Coast favorites, including equity actor J.T. Holmstrom as Gaston, Kay Akervik as Belle, Justin Gordon and Josh McChesney doubling as the Beast, Ken Cusson as Cogsworth, Nancy Williams as Mrs. Potts and Harrison Shields as Lumiere.

Five discount previews Aug. 18-21 and 26 open the run, with opening night set for Aug. 27. Shows continue Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through Sept. 24, with Sunday matinees planned for Sept. 4, 18 and 25.

The Outdoor Forest Theater is located at Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel. General admission ranges from $22 to $36, with discounts for seniors over 65, students, children, teachers and active military. The box office is open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Golden Bough Playhouse on Monte Verde between Eighth and Ninth. For more information, call (831) 622-0100 or visit www.pacrep.org.

Khaki's Italian sports car event to benefit charities

"IT STARTED very, very small and has gotten very, very big," Jim Ockert said of his clothing store's annual gathering of Ferraris at The Barnyard Shopping Village.

Jim and Nick Ockert, the father-and-son team that owns and operates Khaki's Men's Clothier, will host their seventh annual gathering of flashy Italian automobiles Aug. 20 from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

But this year Maseratis and Lamborghinis will be shown as well, and even bigger is its evolution into a charity event that will raise money for the Carmel Youth Center and the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation through a silent auction. "What the JDRF was able to come up with as far as donations was incredible," Jim Ockert said.

In addition to local restaurant meals, wine tours, golf outings and hotel stays, Nick Ockert reported a private party hosted by Grammy-winning film composer Alan Silvestri ("Forrest Gump," "Polar Express" and "Cast Away") will be auctioned. All of the proceeds will benefit the JDR and the youth center. Ten wineries and seven restaurants will provide drink and food for $10 a person — which will also benefit the charities — and a live jazz band will play.

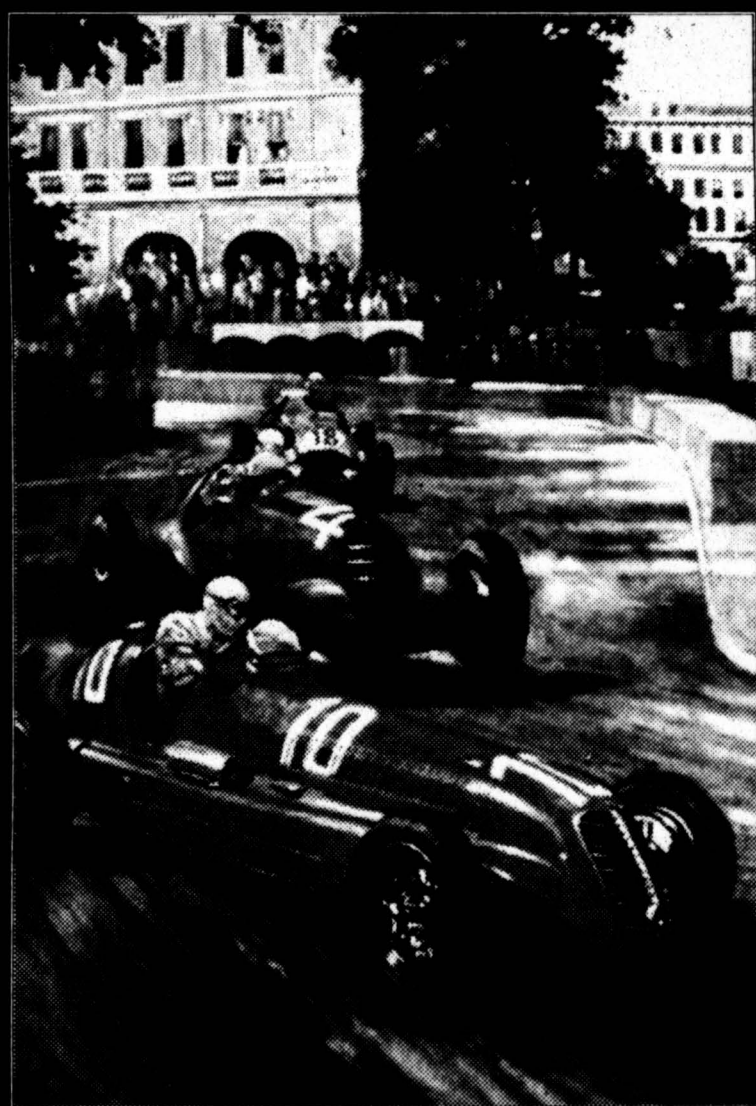

The public is invited to check out the cars and listen to the tunes for free, and any money they spend at the event will be used for a good cause, according to the Ockerts.

For more information, call Khaki's of Carmel at (831) 625-8106.

$345 per officer to outfit them in protective gear.

"If a dirty bomb explodes around here, our officers will need that level of protection," Rawson said, adding that he would like to see Homeland Security money filter down for surveillance equipment and more training.

Ireland also favors spending money on training. "It doesn't make sense to buy equipment if you don't know how to use it," he said.

In April, agencies from all over the county practiced a coordinated response to a simulated terrorist attack. "That was the first time anything of that magnitude had been accomplished on the Monterey Peninsula," Ireland said.

Whenever the feds release a new grant, the Gang of Five meets weekly to field requests. A few months ago, the group wrapped up its 2005 allocations, and local agencies are finally seeing that money, according to Ireland.

"This has been a fantastic opportunity for all first responder agencies throughout Monterey County to work on and enhance our ability to respond to a major emergency," Miller said.

He said the GAA works because its members are not politicians, but lifesavers "who have the expertise and the knowledge" to protect public safety.

WARRING

softens with infinite variety, showing her love and anger, fear and courage, and the shock of betrayal. Our sympathy is all with her as she moves through her suddenly disintegrating life with purpose and grace; a pragmatist married to a poet who believes that all the best poets die young. As a wife and mother, she wants none of it. "You wear death like your turtleneck and corduroy trousers — it's a part of the costume, that's all."

Awamleh cajoles and threatens; offering hope and menace in an effort to keep her husband alive and her marriage intact. Her fury at his refusal takes a form which some will find abhorrent. But she is adamant: "I will not be left behind."

The question of how much latitude to grant a genius is central to this first play by Jody Duncan. Directed by Carey Crockett, who also designed the set, it requires somewhat lengthy changes between the scenes. When, at the end of the second act, Burks faces the audience from a lectern reading his poetry in a fine, clear voice, we finally see and hear the reason for Thomas' acclaim.

If only he had believed in it enough himself.

FLANDERS

conserve the surrounding Mission Trail park.

But according to the EIR, prepared by consultants Denise Duffy & Associates, selling the mansion would conflict with the city's general plan and Local Coastal Program, erode the aesthetics and the viewshed of the Flanders Mansion surroundings, and deteriorate the city's park land.

Under state law, in order to proceed with the sale, the council would have to adopt findings of overriding consideration explaining why the benefits of selling the mansion outweigh the significant adverse impacts.

Under current zoning, the mansion could be occupied by a family, operated as a museum or office, taken over by a nonprofit, used for events, or turned into a motel or bed and breakfast.

The consultants suggested subjecting a buyer or lessee to numerous conditions could relieve some of the impacts of putting the old home into private hands. According to the EIR, the new owners would:

- Not be able to put it to a new use. Flanders was built as a private home but has been used for other public purposes since the city bought it. It has never been a motel or bed and breakfast.

- Not do anything to increase traffic and parking in the neighborhood.

- Have to allow the public on their land and inside the home at least twice a year for a total of 12 hours.

- Not build walls, fences, gates or hedges that could block views of the house from the surrounding park.

- Be required to rehabilitate the mansion consistent with the Secretary of the Interior's Guidelines for Treatment of Historic Properties.

- Preserve access to trails around the parcel, including to the Lester Rowntree Native Plant Arboretum.

- Not be able to add any new buildings.

- Have to follow a preservation plan written by a qualified historian that would include a detailed history of the mansion and discussion of its significance, a list of important features, its current condition and integrity relative to the National Register criteria, discussion of the secretary's standards, and recommendations for the care and treatment of the home.

The revised EIR also includes mitigation measures to

No walls or fences, no increase in traffic and a public open house twice a year lessen impacts on plants and animals — such as the Monterey dusky-footed woodrat — potential archaeological resources and adjacent "environmentally sensitive habitat area."

In listing several alternatives to selling Flanders, the consultants concluded the "no project alternative" — not selling it — could result in further deterioration of the home, which already has peeling paint, cracked plaster, water damage and mold.

Other alternatives involve leasing the mansion rather than selling it, selling a slightly smaller swath of land with the mansion to create more of a buffer between the property and the trails and arboretum, or selling Scout House and/or Rio Park while keeping Flanders.

The 348-page revised draft incorporated and responded to input from 54 letter writers who opined on the first draft released in March. The document, which will cost $100,000 by the time it is finalized, is available online at www.carmel-bythesea.com, in Harrison Memorial Library and for purchase at Copies-by-the-Sea.

The planning commission will host a public hearing to discuss it Wednesday, Aug. 17, at 2 p.m. in Carmel City Hall, Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh avenues. For more information, call (831) 620-2010.

BREAK-INS

Barbara Langdon was also hiking along the Soberanes Point Trail when her car was burglarized between 9:50 and 10:50 a.m. Aug. 5. The perpetrator smashed the passenger-side window and took her cell phone, binoculars and a calculator.

And Saturday, Greg Brian Svalstad left his vehicle parked on the highway across from the entrance to Point Lobos State Reserve, and it was burglarized.

"We hope we catch these people — if it's one or more, I have no idea," DiCarlo said. "We've got to depend on the citizens to use a little more caution in securing their valuables, and if people see anything suspicious or someone acting suspicious near a vehicle, they should call 911 right away."

He also advised people to keep an eye out for someone scooping out parked cars.

"They know where you are, and you don't know they're there," he said.

Big Sur grazing plan pits federal agency against environmentalists

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR SOME folks, a cow grazing in a meadow along the Big Sur Coast is a picture suitable for framing. But for others, it has all the charm of a billboard plastered in the middle of a national park. And that's why a plan by the U.S. Forest Service to allow cattle on 185 acres inside the boundaries of the Ventana Wilderness has drawn strong opposition from environmental groups.

"It sets a dangerous precedent," said Boon Hughey, a Ventana Wilderness Alliance board member. "This is something that needs to be looked at very closely."

Until recently, the Kozy Kove Ranch was an obscure place name familiar to only a few locals on Big Sur's South Coast. Located on the east side of Highway 1, just south of Salmon Creek near the San Luis Obispo County line and about 20 miles north of Hearst Castle, the ranch was acquired by the forest service in 1997.

At first glance, it would appear the forest service has a valid case for allowing grazing on the ranch, because it was routinely grazed prior to its acquisition by the federal agency.

According to the Wilderness Act of 1964, "Livestock grazing, where established prior to an area's designation as wilderness, shall be permitted to continue subject to reasonable regulations as deemed necessary by the Secretary of Agriculture." But according to Hughey, the law requires the forest service to issue a grazing permit for a specific piece of land before it is designated as wilderness. "Existing grazing allotments are grandfathered in," he said. "In the case of the Kozy Kove Ranch, no grazing permit was ever issued."

The Kozy Kove Ranch was designated wilderness on March 22, 2002. That same year, a proposal by the forest service to allow grazing on the ranch was withdrawn after an appeal was filed by the VWA and the Center for Biological Diversity, Hughey said. In 2004, a second proposal was withdrawn after another appeal was filed by the VWA, the CBD, the Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club and Los Padres Forest Watch.

In July, the forest service released a draft environmental assessment of the proposal to issue five 10-year permits allowing grazing on more than 24,000 acres of public land within Los Padres National Forest. The Kozy Kove Ranch is the only allotment in the proposal that includes land designated as wilderness. According to John Bradford, a ranger for the Monterey district of LPNF, his agency is accepting public feedback on the proposal until Aug. 29.

Bradford believes the federal agency should be allowed to authorize grazing at the Kozy Kove Ranch.

"The area has a long history of grazing," he said. "We're not asking for anything that wasn't already done when the ranch was in private hands. We believe it's legal to continue grazing on the ranch."

While Hughey admits grazing on some public lands is acceptable, he believes wilderness lands should be held to a higher standard. "Cows have a strong impact on the public's experience of wilderness lands," he said. "A wilderness is supposed to be a place where the land is left alone, not a place where a bunch of cows are running around."

The low cost of grazing cattle on public lands also bothers Hughey. "The market rate on the South Coast for running one cow per month on private property is $12 to $15," he said. "On public land it's $1.75 a month. It's a sweetheart privilege. They're getting a great deal. You can't even feed your Guinea pig for that."

After the public feedback period ends, the forest service will either revise its assessment or issue a decision. To view the proposal, go to www.fs.fed.us/r5/lospadres/projects/analysis/index.shtml.

It was grazed before, so it can be grazed now, the forest service says

Carmel Valley Library hosts free genealogy event

IF YOU have ever wondered who your ancestors were or where they came from, the Carmel Valley Library is a great place to start.

On Saturday, Aug. 13, from 10 a.m. to noon, the library will host "Finding Your Family: The Genealogical Quest," a talk presented by local genealogy expert Larry Bigbee. The event is the latest installment in the Friends of the Carmel Valley Library's ongoing free lecture series.

According to Bigbee, the key to discovering your genealogy starts and ends with records.

"I'm going to talk about where to find records and how to store them," said Bigbee, vice president of the Monterey County Genealogical Society.

Because the Monterey Peninsula is home to so many retirees, genealogy is a popular local pastime.

"Genealogy takes a lot of work," Bigbee said. "Seniors citizens are often the only ones who have the time."

The library is located at 65 W. Carmel Valley Road. For more information about the lecture series, call the library at (831) 659-2377. For more information about the genealogical society, visit www.mocogen-so.org.

Pull the plug Be Water Wise

Simple cuts in household water use can help you save both water and money every day.

By following these easy indoor water-saving tips, we can maintain water levels in the Carmel River that enhance habitat and protect threatened species and stay within state-imposed water use limits.

- Install low-flow showerheads and faucets in your home.
- Take quick showers instead of baths. Reducing showers by one-minute can save 5-10 gallons of water per shower.
- Run washing machines and dishwashers only when full. Whenever possible, don't pre-rinse your dishes before loading.
- Check for and repair faucet leaks. A dripping faucet can waste as much as 140 gallons of water each month.
- Replace your old washing machine or toilet with a new high-efficiency washer or ultra low-flush toilet. They use 40-60 percent less water and as a California American Water customer you are eligible for rebates of $100 off the purchase price of each appliance.

For additional information about California American Water's rebate program or to receive a complimentary low-flow showerhead or hose nozzle, email us at monterey@amwater.com or call (888) 237-1333.

REXI and KILA von Buseck, 6 and 9 respectively, are pugs who check the tide tables daily to synchronize their outings on Carmel Beach with low tide, when there's more beach to walk and play on.

Although they now reside in Monterey with Mom Silvia and Dad Andreas, Kila and her folks used to live in Carmel when they first moved here from New York a little more than five years ago. Rexi joined the family when he was 6 weeks old and originally came from Salinas. They are bilingual, fluent in both German and English.

"They're our babies, and are spoiled," admitted Mom, who said they get to sleep with her at night. But Rexi and Kila were polite and well behaved despite having been interrupted in their headlong gallop to the water Tuesday morning. They posed for their photos in the sand and stood attentively still for their interviews – without a word of caution from Mom.

Mom Silvia told us that Rexi is very protective of Kila when they play on Carmel Beach, barking at large dogs when they show an interest in pretty Kila and her faun-colored coat. This cuts down on Kila's social life, but she doesn't seem to mind.

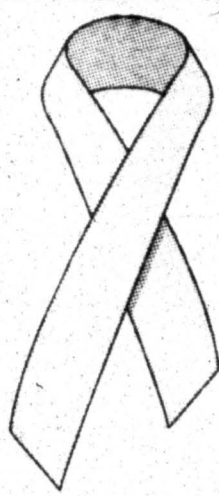

Rexi and Kila have two grown-up sisters at home: Diana, 24, who works at Quail Lodge, and Cecilia, 20, an MPC student who works part time with Mom at Marita's Boutique, a Carmel shop specializing in, but not limited to, women's larger-size apparel.

Although Rexi loves to toss his toy lobster in the air and catch it on its way down, Kila shows no interest in toys, devoting all her attention to the kitchen when Mom is preparing dinner. Both are crazy about pizza, although they're treated only to the crust – but sometimes there are some yummys attached to it.

The Chicken Little Theory

At a real estate conference recently, a member of a group of economists speaking to a full room of real estate professionals suggested they consider something when they heard, as we all often do, that a real estate crash was imminent. He showed a graph for the past 100 years. On it was the average price of a home in our nation for each of those 100 years.

"Notice," he said, "that it hasn't gone down...not even once." He assured us that there have been years in which home prices dropped in certain neighborhoods, and even in certain counties and states. But the underlying trend has always been for home prices to rise. In short, they may fall in certain areas for brief periods of time, but they will continue to outpace the rate of inflation in the long run, if the past century is a good enough guide.

This has led some of us to a new Chicken Little Theory. There are almost always a few analysts – self-styled experts – declaring that the real estate market is about to crash. Why do they do this? Because doing so sells a lot of newsletters and magazines and books. That is reason enough, one supposes, but it isn't reason for any of us to give these analysts any more credibility than they deserve. Let's talk, call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

mesh will be attached to the rebar and sprayed with concrete which "will be dyed or stained the color of the native rock," Lewis said. "It will be unrecognizable." He estimated the completed project will cost just under $20,000.

Carmel resident John Nesheim, who lives on 17th Avenue, said he really doesn't mind all the traffic being rerouted through his residential neighborhood.

"We'll just charge them a toll," he joked.

Nesheim has a simple solution for avoiding road-related problems near Carmel Point — he suggests turning the route into a pedestrian walking path.

"Dead Man's Point" has always been a challenge," he said. "Turning it into a walking path would enhance the tourist value of the area. It would set the tone for the leisurely pace of the area. Carmel is world famous for its walking."

Agencies meet to prepare strategy for next winter

This week's collapse was unrelated to the erosion that threatened another section of Scenic Road when a diverted Carmel River strayed dangerously close to the sandy bluff holding up the pavement.

Wednesday, representatives from a vast array of government agencies met with Carmel residents in an effort to come up with a management strategy for future breaching of the sandbar that forms across the mouth of the river every summer.

Pam Armas, meeting facilitator and superintendent of the

No work until the coastal commission issues an emergency permit

Monterey District of California State Parks, said the three-and-a-half hour meeting resulted in the formation of a technical committee, which will recommend a short-term protocol for breaching. She said the group aims to develop a long-term management plan for the sandbar.

Lewis, who attended the meeting, said a such a plan "could take two or three years to formulate."

"We have a short-term goal to have a temporary protocol in place by Nov. 1," he said. "This way, if an emergency does come up, we'll be able to address it in the best way possible."

Agencies represented at the meeting included public works, state parks, the Monterey County Water Resources

Agency, the California Department of Fish and Game, national marine fisheries, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the California Coastal Commission, the Big Sur Land Trust, the Carmel River Steelhead Association, the Carmel River Watershed Conservancy, Home Owners for Effective Lagoon Management, the Carmel Point and Lagoon Preservation Association, the Watershed Institute of CSUMB, State Assemblyman John Laird's office, county supervisor Dave Potter's office and U.S. Congressman Sam Farr's office. Representatives from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and U.S. Fish and Wildlife were invited but unable to attend.

Everybody on board also kept an eye on passing vessels: mammoth passenger ferries, huge oceangoing freighters and heavily laden barges.

"It was actually more interesting swimming backstroke, because I could see all the ferries and the barges and the supertankers going by," she said. "Whereas with freestyle, I never got a chance to see any of that."

Tang and peanut butter

At 45-minute intervals, she stopped swimming long enough to drink and eat by taking cups from a basket on the end of an extension pole. Under CSA rules, she was never permitted to touch the boat, a person or anything else that could aid her swim. Drinks of choice were warm Tang, apple juice and chocolate milk. She ate sports bars, bananas and, at one point, a peanut-butter-and-honey sandwich.

"My niece got it on videotape — me stuffing sandwich in my face," she said.

Within a few hours of completing the record-setting swim, she was on the phone with her father, civil engineer Clayton Neill, and mother, Katie, in their Carmel Valley home. "Tina told us she swam for this long period of time and ended up on a beach, and there were people who came and greeted her — mostly men — who were there for other reasons," he said. "They couldn't believe it."

But her parents could.

"She had the confidence and knew she was going to do it," he said. Her parents worried not only about the 28-mile swim, but about the terrorism that recently hit the British capital.

And they hadn't really expected her to finish the swim so quickly. In 2003, weather forced her to wait several days before starting her freestyle swim.

This time, other factors threatened Neill's goal. With only three captains certified by the CSA, she booked the man who led her on her first swim across. When he died in January, she scrambled to find another at what was a very late date.

And when she found a willing captain, he canceled at the last minute, saying the owner of his boat had just rebuilt the engine and didn't want it enduring the slow pace of a swimmer. "Here I am, leaving in two weeks, and I don't have anything in place," she said.

Then she contacted Brickell and learned he had a few days he could spare. The weather and tides cooperated, and Neill was in the water at the opening of the 10-day window granted by the CSA.

She was truly in her element. Through her years at Tularcitos, Carmel Middle and Carmel High schools, Neill competed with numerous swim teams, specializing in the backstroke. At CHS, she was co-captain of the swim team under legendary coach Bob Walthour.

She made All-American in the individual backstroke while at UC Davis, and on a family vacation in Hawaii in 1986, she and sisters Kathy and Kerry swam the 10 miles from Lanai to Maui.

Once in Minnesota, she took on open-water swimming seriously and participated in a 28-mile competitive swim around Manhattan in 2001. Her first channel swim in 2003 made her the 675th person to cross, according to the CSA. (The first was Captain Matthew Webb, who swam it in 21 hours and 45 minutes in 1875.)

Living in St. Paul, she's in the water all year long and coaches high school, college and master swimmers.

While deliberately not allowing training to take over her life, about a year ago, Neill added hours-long swims in the lake to her fitness routine. To ensure fishermen could see her and she would be safe if she became exhausted, she pulled a 4-foot rescue tube behind her that also carried food and water.

But other than her traveling companions and her family, no one knew she was stepping into cold English waters in the early morning darkness Aug. 9. "She told us before she swam it, 'I don't want anybody to know until after I finish,'" Clayton Neill said.

And the next time she takes on a major swim — she keeps a list of other feats she would like to master — it's likely her closest supporters will again be sworn to secrecy.

"There are people in Minnesota who think I'm in Switzerland," she said.

"This project's aims are solely to help the fish," Robinson explained to the LUAC members visiting the project site. "There is nothing else going on here. Unlike in places where many dams are located, the conditions here are great for figures prominently in the spiritual beliefs of Big Sur's pre-European population, the Esselen, who considered it be the center of the world.

According to Big Sur historian Jeff Norman, newspaper mogul William Randolph Hearst purchased the land surrounding the camp from a homesteading family, the Swetnams, in the 1920s. He later leased the land to the Boy Scouts for 99 years. The camp was established in 1954 and is used every summer by as many as 1,000 Scouts.

In 1973 the California State Legislature, with the support of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, designated the Little Sur River a protected waterway. The 23-mile long river has been federally-designated as a "Wild and Scenic Study River" since 1998. Local environmental activists hope the river will one day be granted the full "Wild and Scenic" status the nearby Big Sur River received in 1992. Curiously, the Wild and Scenic River Act of 1968 was enacted by Congress to prevent the construction of dams on rivers of environmental concern.

Improvements to this dam, which the Boy Scouts built in 1955, could cost more than $1 million — all of it from the scouting group. The money will be spent to protect a threatened species of fish.

steelhead. The NMFS told us this is the best steelhead habitat located south of San Francisco."

According to a planning commission staff report, NMFS required the improvements as a condition for future use of the dam. When the Scouts closed the spillway in 2002 to get ready for another summer's swimming, lifesaving, water sports, boating and canoeing, federal officials took the opportunity to get involved. And they want improvements to protect the fish in place by next summer.

"As a result of a settlement agreement with NMFS, the Boy Scouts agreed to install a fish ladder capable of bidirectional juvenile passage," says a county report. "NMFS has allowed the site to remain without a ladder until Oct. 15, 2005. If a ladder is not installed by this date, the flash boards shall not be put in place for the 2006 summer camp season."

In addition to installing a fish ladder to allow for the free movement of juvenile steelhead during the summer season, the project will add concrete steps in the existing dam spillway to improve passage for spawning adult steelhead; install two large woody debris structures adjacent to the dam to provide refuge for adult and juvenile steelhead; and re-contour the bed behind the dam to improve fish passage conditions. The project will start in early September, said John Dvorsky, a fisheries biologist who works for Swanson Hydrology and Geomorphology. "We have a little more than a month to build it," Dvorsky said.

Before the project begins, the steelhead in the pond will be moved upstream and downstream from dam, he said. Construction will temporarily drain the pond.

The Boy Scout camp is located on a gated dirt road that begins at Bottcher's Gap, a national forest campground. While not accessible to public vehicles, the dirt road also functions as a public hiking trail to a variety of backpacking destinations in the Ventana Wilderness. Bottcher's Gap also marks the end of 7-mile-long Palo Colorado Road, which is located off Highway 1 about 12 miles south of Carmel.

The camp takes its name from Pico Blanco, a 3,700-foot mountain that towers over it. Pico Blanco, so named because its distinctively sharp white peak, is reputedly the largest body of high grade limestone in California. The mountain

Is a Reverse Mortgage Right for You?

A reverse mortgage turns a portion of your equity into tax-free money you can use right now. You make no monthly payments on a reverse mortgage and the loan is not due to be paid until you sell, move out of the house or pass away.

You can use this money for any purpose: living expenses, home improvements or a grandchild's college education.

Homeowners who are 62 or older may qualify and be eligible even if there is an existing first or second mortgage. The size of the reverse mortgage depends upon the borrower's age(s), the program selected, the home's value, and prevailing interest rates. There are no income qualifications and you continue to retain title to your home.

Call if you have questions or wish a free Reverse Mortgage Handbook.

At what price trails?

THE U.S. government owns 45 percent of California, 45 percent of Arizona, 64 percent of Utah and 83 percent of Nevada — totals that would surely come as a surprise to most residents of these states.

The masses, after all, do not live on this federally owned property, almost all of which is locked up either in military bases or national forests and doesn't even show up on local tax rolls.

But if the land doesn't produce any revenue for schools and libraries, neither did it cost much to obtain. (Except for one very notable exception.)

Indeed, most of the western United States — 334 million acres in all — was seized by military conquest in the Mexican-American War of 1846-1848. According to the Bureau of Land Management, the cost of this war in 1998 inflation-adjusted dollars was just $16 billion, or less than $50 per acre, for what turned out to be some pretty valuable property.

One of the pieces of this land is now known as Brazil Ranch — 1,200 highly scenic acres on the south side of the Bixby Creek Bridge.

After getting the ranch, along with millions of other acres, for a bargain-basement price in 1848, the U.S. government homesteaded it to several families as part of its policy to encourage settlement of the newly acquired, and largely vacant, place called California.

Fast-forward 150 years. A Las Vegas real estate speculator has purchased Brazil Ranch from the estate of TV pioneer Allen Funt for about $2.5 million, or $2,000 per acre. After unearthing the old, homesteaded subdivision on the property, and threatening to sell the pieces one by one to Silicon Valley millionaires, he convinced the U.S. government to buy back the very land it originally acquired in 1848 for $50 per acre (in 1998 dollars), this time for the colossal price of $23 million, or almost $20,000 per acre (in the same dollars)!

Why so much? Was it because the public was clamoring for a bit more land to added to the vast Los Padres National Forest? Did the area's mountain lions, hawks, rock cod and other creatures have insufficient habitat? Hardly.

The reason taxpayers ponied up such a huge amount for such a (relatively) small piece of land was to prevent it from being dotted with eight or nine homes on its 1,200 acres. In other words, to protect the view.

Now, forestry officials are discussing opening a trail along the edge of the ranch's coastal bluff. And where will the hikers park their cars while they enjoy the new trail? On the shoulders of Highway 1, officials said last week. But on busy weekends, the long lines of cars that will form will be a serious disruption of the sublime views of Brazil Ranch from the Bixby Bridge overlook and Hurricane Point.

Would the homes have been that much worse?

Let the handicapped decide

Dear Editor,

Why not take the proposed modifications to the ADA a step further and allow local handicapped residents, or those with handicapped parking permits, to vote on proposed changes to local historic buildings? Who better to balance the need for access with the need for historic preservation in their own community? Also, out-of-towners could not argue with their decision. When the Cottage of Sweets was sued for having a step at its door, I asked why the shop's windows couldn't be used to sell candy — a question that was overlooked. I believe the majority of handicapped voters in Carmel would have chosen that compromise.

Music, not tourists

Dear Editor,

At the city council meeting last Tuesday, I spoke in favor of the music ordinance, except for letting hotels in the residential areas be included. This was based on a person from La Playa Hotel requesting live music in their restaurant. The city council made quite a few changes in the ordinance last month, eliminating most of the protections included by the planning commission. However, the basic noise level requirements remained essentially the same. After public comment on the ordinance this month, the council discussed new options for extending live music for restaurants in the residential areas. They also increased the number of allowed days and increased some of the allowed noise levels. The public was blindsided with major changes to the ordinance that occurred after public comment had ended. Last month, the first reading was postponed because of the magnitude of changes. They were minor compared to the changes made this month. The planning commission felt that their demonstration of the proposed noise levels outside a restaurant would satisfy the EIR requirements for the commercial area. Our city ordinances do not give as much noise protection to residents in the commercial area. However, allowing live music in the residential areas definitely requires a full-fledged EIR. A majority of the city council, except the mayor and council member Cunningham, voted to extend live music into the residential areas without benefit of an EIR, nor any public comment. This same council recently voted to not allow walking tours into the residential areas — how ironic can you get — live music, but not live tourists. It's a shame that lawsuits may be the only way to get this council to follow the existing laws of our city and state.

'Disgusted and depressed'

Dear Editor,

I am disgusted and depressed at the way our city is being run. Employee relations and morale, for example, are at an all-time low. Valued employees continue to be let go. The streets are dirty; trash isn't being picked up and city landscaping is overrun by weeds. Moreover, I have just learned that the city has brought in another attorney to handle the proposed sale of precious parkland including the Flanders Mansion!

So now we residents are paying for a second attorney. This seems to be just one more outrageous example of our city wasting taxpayer dollars on high-priced consultants to give them the answers they want.

Connie Wright, Carmel

Abalone poacher a 'criminal'

Dear Editor,

Perhaps you should become more knowledgeable about our Central Coast marine environment before you align yourself (editorial, Aug. 5) with the socioeconomic plight of a criminal whose disdain is obvious by his repeat flouting of our laws.

If you truly believe abalone are so plentiful along the Central Coast, then you might consult with local experts at Hopkins Marine Station, Moss Landing Laboratory or MBARI to learn why abalone populations have been declining. Could it be the result of overfishing and a devastating "wasting disease"? Personally, as a youth growing up in Southern California, some 60 years ago, we found abalone readily available along the rock shores from San Diego to Pt. Dume, yet abalone populations are few there today. Do you suppose the California Department of Fish and Game considered these facts in the legal seasonal take of abalone (three per day, with a maximum of 24 per year, 7 inches or larger specimens, per licensed sportsman, using free diving equipment only, in the limited coastal area north of San Francisco)?

You would find many less endangered and far less expensive sea foods available to "feed one's family," calamari included.

Once Mr. Ty Van Lieu has served his time, you may want to assist him finding a day job. Our local population of abalone-feeding Southern sea otters will also appreciate his finding legitimate day work.

D.L. and Dianne Watson, Pebble Beach

The pot and the kettle

Dear Editor,

I wonder how Madame Reynard can standing living in Paris if she finds Carmel full of trash and with impossible parking (letters, July 8). If the trash baskets are overflowing after the weekend, it is because people are conscientious enough to throw their discards in the bins and not on the ground, as is often the case in Paris. As to the difficulties in parking, would she prefer the metal posts that line many Paris streets?

I can't even be accused of prejudice as I was born and raised in Paris and still maintain an apartment there, in the 9th arrondissement.

THE CARMEL Planning Commission would rather see John Mandurrage build the 13-unit senior residential care complex he once envisioned for two downtown parcels than transfer most of the water allocated to that project to something else.

Mandurrage appeared before the commission Wednesday to propose he keep a little more than a third of the 1.2 acre-feet (.286 from existing buildings and .897 from the city) allocated to the unbuilt senior residential care facility, which was conceived when Mandurrage and his business partner had aging fathers who would live there.

It received city approval in 2000 but still needs a coastal development permit. Mandurrage set the project aside while the city's Local Coastal Program was certified, but in the intervening years, their fathers died — and with them the motivation for building the complex.

Now in the process of buying out his partner's share of the land, Mandurrage wants to build two 3,200-square-foot, two-story homes with subterranean garages, basements and courtyards on the back-to-back lots on San Carlos and Mission streets between Seventh and Eighth avenues. Existing buildings, including the Hitchcock House — which preservation activist Enid Sales unsuccessfully attempted to save from demolition by suing the city — would be torn down.

The water he'd use would be enough for plenty of fixtures: three-and-a-half bathrooms in each house, including master baths with oversized tubs and separate showers, as well as bar sinks, on top of the other usual water uses in a Carmel home.

"If you say, 'No,' the only thing I can do is go ahead and build the residential care facility, because everyone knows water is gold. It wouldn't be clever not to build it," he said. "If you force me to, I'll go ahead and build this, and the city doesn't get its water."

An OK would return .717 acre-feet to the city's commercial water allocation. Although "the strictest reading of the zoning code" would require returning all .897 acre feet to the city if the senior home is not built, planner Sean Conroy suggested the planning commission approve an allocation of .083 acre-feet, concluding that reducing the number of bathrooms in each home by one would not have a great impact on Mandurrage's plans. The commission would set a public hearing on the matter and then make a recommendation to the city council.

But commissioners were uncomfortable with the idea of committing water to his houses, even if it meant getting some to distribute to other projects of the city's choosing.

"I view the water not as your personal property, but as that of the project that was approved," commissioner Ken Talmage said. "If that project is not going to be built, that water belongs to the City of Carmel."

Commissioner Robin Wilson argued for a little fiddling in the application of public policy.

"If it is economically feasible to add a little bit of water out of our pool in order to make the project that Mr. Mandurrage is now proposing work, it's probably to the benefit of the city," he said, adding that it would result in nice housing downtown. "I don't think we should get hung up on absolutes here."

He moved adoption of Conroy's recommendation to allocate .083 acre-feet to Mandurrage's houses and set the public hearing, but the motion failed 1-3, with Talmage, chairman Bill Strid and commissioner Julie Culver dissenting. Alan Hower was absent.

The owner no longer wants to build the home because the intended residents have died

The county demands an eight-minute response time for calls, while CRFA often responds within two.

"The difference between two minutes and eight minutes for anyone having a stroke can be the difference between living and not," Rose said. Paramedic David Jedinak testified later that brain death occurs six minutes after blood flow stops.

"We choose to be above the level of the county in our ability to save lives with improved response times and quality control," Reade told the council.

"We can contract with an agency of our own choosing — with the State of California or another ambulance service — but experience tells me this is a very expensive option," Rose continued.

"The City of Carmel could create its own ambulance service, which is by far the most costly and unpalatable option," he concluded. "The only other alternative is to continue with CRFA."

Councilman Mike Cunningham suggested Guillen investigate whether the ambulance agency could be run more efficiently and economically.

"How can we do this a little smarter?" he asked, wondering if people could be cross-trained to work on the ambulance as well as the fire engine so the number of employees in the station could be reduced. "It's gotten to be a very expensive service. It's a very important service, but if [expenses are] uncontrolled, we're going to drown."

"The chief has already made plans to grow revenues," Rose responded. "The fact is that this is not a headless beast running down a hill."

Jedinak said Reade's plan to expand the coverage area could increase response times. And he said that reducing the number of people on staff at the firehouse — currently two medics and two firefighters during the day, with an additional firefighter at night — would cut into the effectiveness of what he called an "exceptional" ambulance service.

"I have witnessed numerous lifesaving acts that have affected members of this council," Jedinak said.

Ultimately, the council directed Guillen to research other ambulance options, including contracting with an outside provider or having a city-operated service, as well as determining whether CRFA could operate at a lower cost to the city. The council and Mayor Sue McCloud were not in favor of adding CRFA's territory to the county's contract.

In the meantime, Guillen also said the city would pay its first-quarter share of the CRFA budget while that research is done.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by JENNIFER BAJET CABANTAC in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that JENNIFER BAJET CABANTAC be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. To whom it may concern:

It has been my pleasure to work with Michael Coleman. He is warm, caring, and very easy to communicate with. Michael listens well and has excellent follow-through.

As a long distance buyer, it was imperative to have an agent who was honest, thorough, unbiased, and looked out for my best interest. Michael handled everything for me - he was my eyes and ears. I would trust him to do it again without hesitation.

Michael is a rare find in the real estate world. He is truly the buyer's or seller's unequivocal advocate. He puts self-interest aside and truly works for his client. I highly recommend Michael to anyone looking for an agent.

Sincerely,
Sue Cantor

POLICE LOG

Carmel P.D. and wanted documentation for a past-tense non-injury accident that occurred on 08-05 on Eighth Avenue. Driver exchanged information with the other driver.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A wicker bench was stolen from the area of San Carlos and Seventh.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Officer was flagged down by a female subject at Junipero and Fifth on report of a domestic dispute with an intoxicated male subject at 1855 hours. The male subject, age 54, was located and placed under arrest for public intoxication after the officer observed him staggering from side to side as he walked eastbound on Ocean Avenue. Upon checking his welfare, the officer noted a strong odor of alcohol emanating from his body and breath. The subject had slurred speech and bloodshot eyes. The subject was found to be highly intoxicated.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Manager of an inn on Fifth Avenue reported being battered by a guest who was unhappy with the stay at the hotel. CPD units responded and determined that the initial report of a battery was unfounded. Contact made with a male and a female guest who advised that the manager provided them with erroneous directions from Carmel to San Francisco on 08-05. On today's date, after a jog, the couple found no hot water for a shower. After complaining to the manager, they were told to go to a different room and shower there. The couple found the room to have been recently occupied, and housekeeping had not cleaned the room yet. The couple asked for a refund, and a dispute ensued between the guests and the manager. Both parties were counseled, and the guests went to another hotel.

CONCOURS WEEK

World's finest automobiles converge on the beautiful Monterey Peninsula

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SINCE ITS founding in 1950, the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance has grown from a single event shared by a group of friends who lived in the area to a solid week of impressive car events that draw participants and spectators from around the world to exhibit, race, sell, buy and ogle. Events catering to car buffs run the gamut from a multi-million-dollar auctions to races and judged displays of the world's finest machines. Festivities begin Aug. 15 with an expansive sale of automotive memorabilia and conclude Aug. 21 with the renowned Concours d'Elegance itself — an event unmatched for its fabulous entrants, stunning venue and charity. The intervening days include rallies of vintage autos and sports cars, several auctions, the top historic automobile racing event in the country, an indulgent gathering to celebrate Italian automotive genius and an indescribable day of food, wine and notable racing and collector cars.

Here's a complete rundown of these fantastic events — and we dare you to try to attend them all!

The stunning scenery of Carmel Bay is usually ringed with fairways and greens, but during the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance each August, the view from The Lodge is of sun-drenched crowds (above) ogling nearly a hundred of the finest antique cars in the world (below). Even this year's price increase for the charity event — to $150 per ticket — seems unlikely to discourage spectators.

Christie's Exceptional Motor Cars auction Monterey Jet Center Aug. 18. Preview Aug. 15-18

Formerly held in Pebble Beach at the conclusion of historic car week, the Christie's Exceptional Motor Cars auction will be held for the second year at the Monterey Jet Center Thursday night. Considered by many to be the most prestigious of car auctions, and heralded as "the longest continuous name in the collector-car market," the Christie's sale features unusual vehicles rarely seen at public auction. This year's roster will include the 1961 Ferrari 250 GT Berlinetta known as "the Bread Van" — designed by the European Count Volpi in a revolt against Enzo Ferrari that began inside the factory — which is expected to fetch as much as $5 million. For more information, call (800) 395-6300 or visit www.christies.com.

The Quail — A Motorsports Gathering Quail Lodge and Resort Friday, Aug. 19, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Entering its third year, The Quail — a gathering of a few thousand car and motorcycle enthusiasts at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley — will pay tribute to the legendary Mexican race, La Carrera Panamericana, with a selection of 120 pre- and post-war sports and racing cars. Among them will be 20 that competed when the race was held from 1950 to 1954 along the Mexican portion of the newly built Panamerican Road intended to unite the Americas. Ten Alfa Romeos, the marque car of this year's vintage car week, and an unparalleled display of vintage motorcycles are also on tap at "The Q." Once again, the Bay Area Engine Modelers will exhibit fully operational miniature engines, and guests will also be invited to test drive new Bentleys and take an off-road hillclimb in a Range Rover. The Q separates itself from other events by providing exceptional food and wine. Under the leadership of Bernardus Executive Chef Cal Stamenov, the culinary team will prepare California cuisine reflecting the Mexican roots of the Panamericana, and wines will be poured to complement the cuisine.

Tickets are $150 per person and include a collectible poster and event magazine, as well as access to the Bonhams & Butterfields auction. Children 12 and under are free. Call (877) 734-4628 or visit www.quailodge.com.

Concorso Italiano
Black Horse Golf Course, Seaside
Friday, Aug. 19, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Celebrating its 20th anniversary, Concorso Italiano promises to satisfy every Italy-inspired craving. This year will mark the first under the sole leadership of new owners Jack and Leslie Wadsworth, and they have pledged to celebrate accordingly.

Featuring Alfa Romeo and the 40th anniversary of the Lamborghini Miura, Concorso will also salute special Ferrari models, including the Superamerica and the F430, as well as the Maserati Gransport.

With close to 2,000 entries, a wide array of vendors and thousands of spectators, the well-attended Concorso has presented some traffic and parking issues in the past, but the Wadsworths hired experts to solve those holdups and have said new lanes, traffic flow, parking areas and clear signs will accommodate the crowds and minimize delays. Gold tickets run $150-$180, with general admission $75 to $100, depending on date of purchase.

1990. While working with Christie's International Motor Cars Ltd., and later with RM Auctions, Gooding achieved several record-setting prices, including the sale of a 1938 Alfa Romeo 8C 2900 B for $4.07 million for Christie's and a 1962 LeMans-winning Ferrari 330 TRI LM for $6.49 million for RM. Among this year's offerings of rare automobiles will be the 1967 Ferrari 275 GTS/4 NART Spyder, which was conceived by Ferrari's Le Mans-winning driver and U.S. importer Luigi Chinetti as the ultimate convertible Ferrari. It is the prototype and the first of the 10-car series, chassis number 09437, which will be offered by Gooding & Company at the Pebble Beach Auction and has an unmatched combination of history and specifications.

In addition to being the first built, it is one of only two NART Spyderys with aluminum coachwork. Completed at the end of 1966, it arrived in the U.S. just in time to be entered in the 1967 12 Hours of Sebring race where it was driven by journalist Denise McCluggage and Marianne "Pinkie" Rollo. Even with little time for preparation, the essentially stock but lightweight alloy-bodied NART Spyder came home second in its class in one of the most grueling and hotly contested endurance races of the international season. This was the only period race in which a NART Spyder ever competed.

After its success at Sebring, it was loaned to MGM Studios, where it was repainted from yellow to burgundy for a stronger screen presence, and introduced to Steve McQueen for his starring role in "The Thomas Crown Affair." No stranger to the excitement of fast cars, McQueen fell for the NART Spyder's combination of performance and style and placed an order with Chinetti for one of his own.

Still in its burgundy "Thomas Crown Affair" livery, 09437 was the September 1967 cover car and featured road test in Road & Track magazine where it was described as "the most satisfying sports car in the world." It turned in a 0-60 mph time of 6.7 seconds, quarter mile in 14.7 seconds at 99 mph and top speed of 155 mph in Road & Track's rigorous testing procedure, an exceptional performance largely attributable to its aluminum bodywork.

20 years ago (from The Carmel Pine Cone, August 1985):

More than 100 vintage entries grace Sunday event

THE 35TH Annual Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance will be held Sunday Aug. 25 at the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

In addition to the outstanding field of more than 100 vintage and classic entries, there will be a large class of Bugattis, which is the feature marque.

In honor of this, there will be a special display of all six Bugatti Royales ever made. Weighing approximately 7,000 pounds each and close to 20 feet long, these elegant machines have never been assembled together before, and perhaps never will be again.

The Musee National de l'Automobile at Mulhouse, France is to send two — the 1933 Frank Ward limousine and the famous 1927 Coupe Napoleon. They will be joined by the 1931 Weinberger cabriolet from the Henry Ford Museum, the 1931 Kellner Coach from the Cunningham Automotive Collection and, from Harrah's Automobile Collection, the 1931 Berline de Voyage and the 1931-32 Binder Coupe de Ville.

The field will open for spectators at 10:30 a.m. and tickets are $20 with children 12 and under free if accompanied by an adult.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the United Way of the Monterey Peninsula and the Pebble Beach Foundation.

2005 Tour d'Elegance to cruise Pebble Beach, Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur

By LAITH AGHA

SINCE IT first hit the streets and highways of the Monterey Peninsula in 1998, the Tour d'Elegance has become one of the greatest joy rides in world, with exquisitely maintained classic cars testing their mettle under real-world conditions — not to mention Los Laureles Grade.

This year, the rolling jamboree of classic cars — just three days before the Concours d'Elegance — will still start at the Polo Grounds in Pebble Beach and head out on 17-Mile Drive. But the impressive cars won't be making their way through Pacific Grove and Monterey as they have in years past, and instead of the grueling Laureles Grade, they will use Clint Eastwood's Tehama Golf Club as a stopping point between Highway 68 and Carmel Valley Road.

And when the 75 or so classics make their way out of the valley, they will be heading south along the Big Sur coast for what promises to be a dream drive for the caravan.

It will go as far as Point Sur, at which point the cars will use the naval station as a turnaround.

The tour departs at 8:30 a.m. and, three hours later, will end up in downtown Carmel. The cars will be parked along Ocean Avenue for public viewing while the drivers sit down to a luncheon at Devendorf Park. The free display — much cheaper than a $150 ticket to the concours — will last until 2 p.m.

If you want to catch the classic beauties in motion, a couple of prime spots have been identified for eye gazing: anywhere on Carmel Valley Road between the mouth of the valley and Hacienda Hay and Feed, and along Highway 1, from Rio Road to Point Sur. But the best spot, according to Stuart Pressman, co-chair of the tour, will be at the Bixby Creek Bridge, 13 miles south of Carmel, when two of the groups of cars will be passing each other, one heading north and the other south (The cars travel in four different groups).

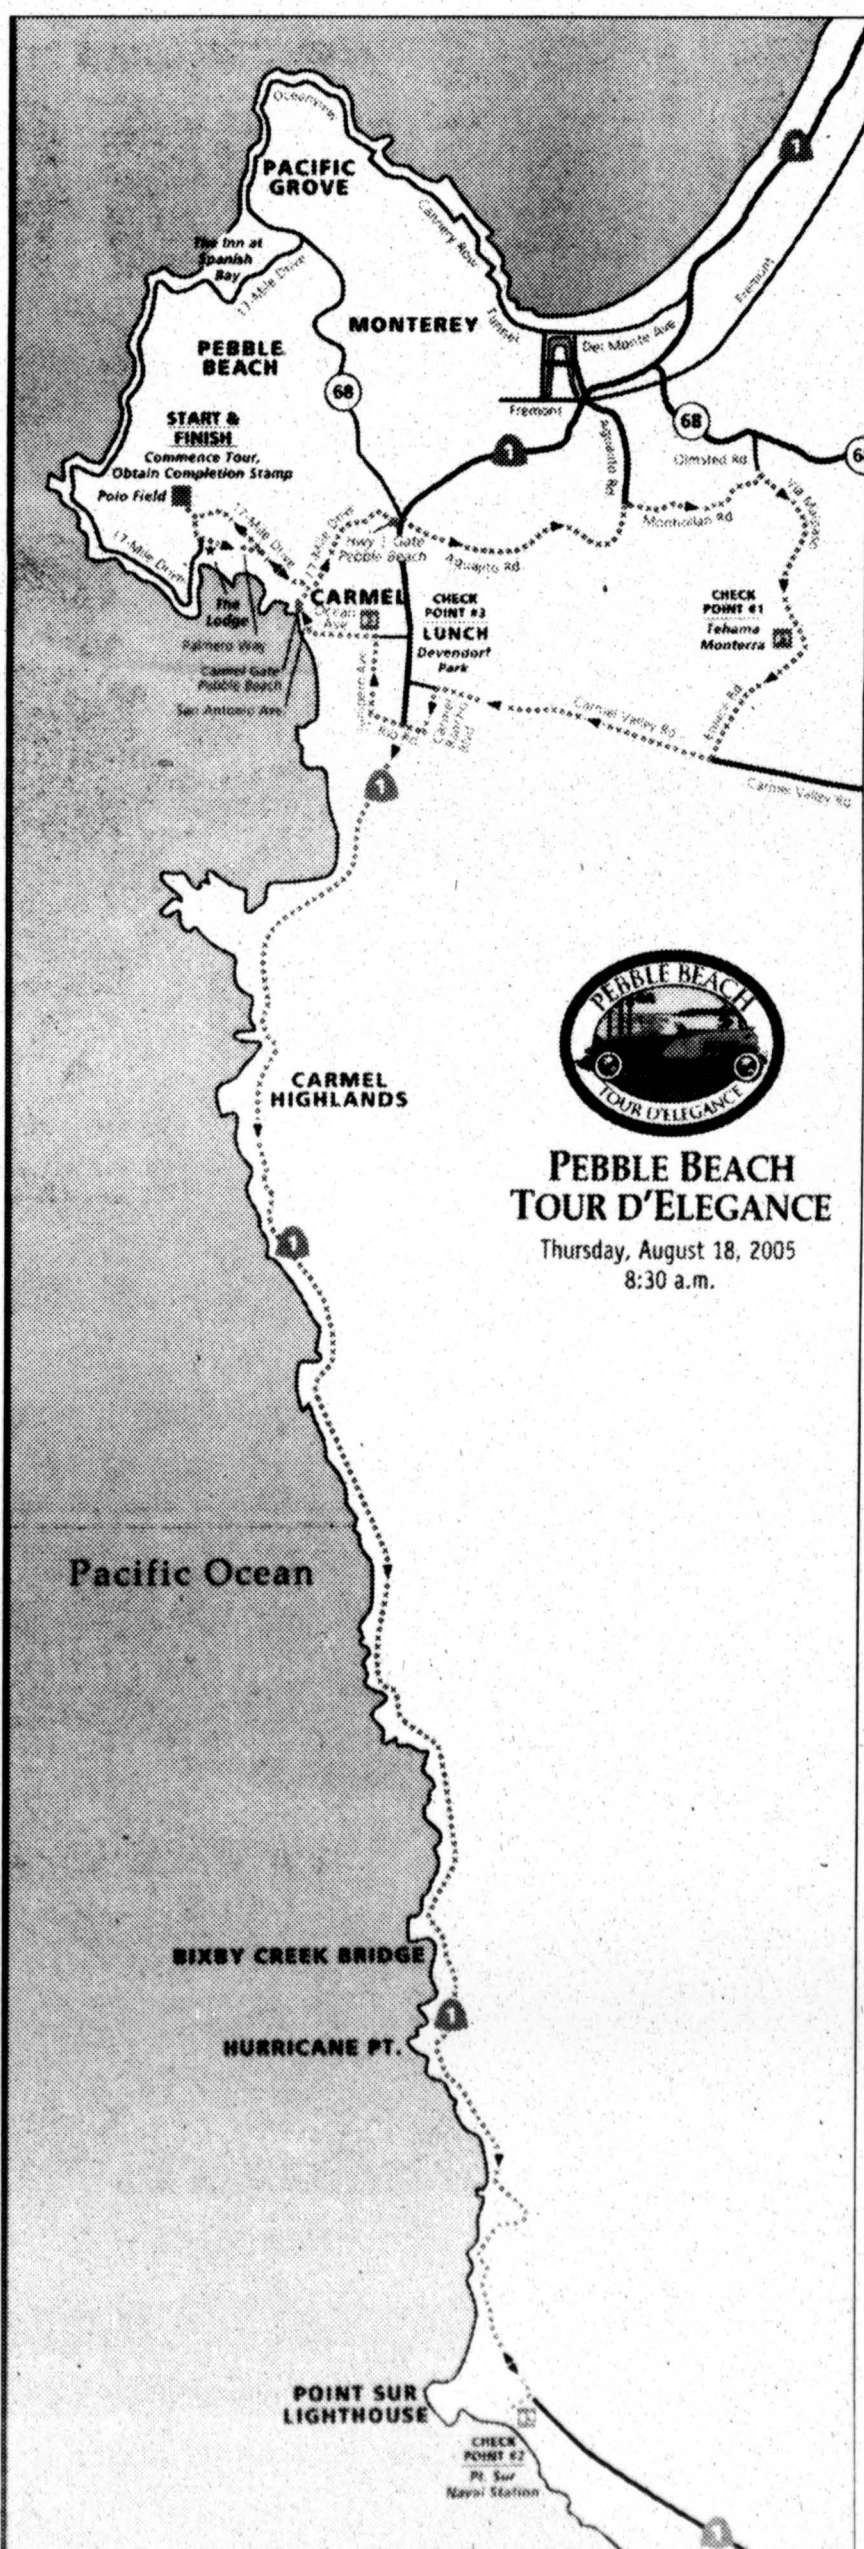

Among those cars will be Stirling Moss' 1955

Mercedes-Benz 300 SLR, the car Moss drove during his record-setting performance in the Mille Miglia. Fifty years later, his record time still stands.

The 60-mile route will be the longest in the tour's eight-year history. Can the cars hack it? After all, they are old.

Most of them will be just fine, since these classic automobiles receive more attention than an only child. However, tour coordinators must prepare for the unforeseeable mechanical failure. Two tow trucks

Tennis Club tennis courts adjacent to the second fairway of Pebble Beach Golf Links — the affair was moved prominently to the Lodge in 1952.

"It's become an international event," says Robert T. Devlin, author of "Pebble Beach, A Matter of Style," which chronicles the Concours from its birth in 1950 to 1980. "They have been able to bring in cars from around the world."

5 years ago (from The Carmel Pine Cone, August 2000):

'Best of the Best' will turn heads

ONE OF this year's 50th anniversary highlights at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance will be a collection of past Best of Show vehicles spanning the last 50 years. Concours judges pick the top classic in each class, including Bugattis, American Classics, Rolls-Royces and Ferraris, among others. The Best of Show vehicle is chosen as the top car among the winners of each class.

"Since this is our 50th anniversary, we decided this would be the perfect year to bring together a beautiful and diverse collection of the past Best of Show vehicles," said Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance chairman Glenn Mounger. "We believe this gathering of distinguished vehicles will give enthusiasts a special insight to the history of the Concours as well as the history of the automobile."

And 7 years ago (from The Carmel Pine Cone, August 1998):

Inaugural Pebble Beach Concours 'tour' proves these cars aren't trailer queens

WE IMAGINE there were skeptics when the tour was proposed. Automobiles restored especially for Pebble — like kids in their new Sunday clothes — spending the day running about the community, showing off and having fun, just days from the Sabbath; reason for doubt. But Concours officials know the heart of l'automobilistes.

At 10:30 a.m. Thursday, August 13, 70 Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance entrants leave the polo grounds in single file with Stirling Moss in the lead car to circuit 17 Mile Drive, leaving by the Pacific Grove gate, around by the ocean, into Monterey, with a late-morning checkpoint at El Estero Lake, then on to Highway 68, over Los Laureles Grade where they will lunch at Holman Ranch.

This scenic route, and the afternoon drive through Carmel, returning to the Polo Field in the late afternoon (a total of 45 miles) offers many opportunities to see this beauty-in-motion, and it goes a long way toward dispelling the notion that cars at the P.B. Concours d'Elegance are trailer queens.

will be stationed along Highway 1 in Big Sur, another will follow the tour for its duration, and two mechanics will be traveling with the cars. Also, 12 CHP officers will be on hand to assist with traffic logistics.

Over the years, the tow trucks and mechanics have been put to use, and not just to deal with breakdowns.

"One year there was a one-cylinder engine car from the early 1900s," explained Stuart Pressman, co-chair of the tour. "It was a year when we went over the Laureles Grade. It had to be towed to the top, and then it coasted down to Carmel Valley Road and drove the rest of the way. There was nothing wrong with the car — it just didn't have the power to get up the hill."

With valuable cars such as that one bunched together for two hours, traffic on Peninsula roads can slow down quite a bit, but disgruntled motorists are in the minority, says Pressman.

"When it's concours week, I purposefully go get stuck in traffic, turn on the air conditioning and just watch the cars pass by," said Pressman. "It's really an awesome thing to see."

Not only does it make for spectacular viewing, but the tour is part of a weekend that raises approximately $500,000 a year for local charities, including the United Way, the Boys & Girls Club, the Pebble Foundation, the Kinship Center and the Natividad Medical Center in Salinas.

■ The Lodge at Pebble Beach has been the host of the Concours since the event's inception.

■ There are 27 judged classes. The Best of Show is selected from among the class winners.
